

engagement for decades.

I am pleased to have received The Lifetime Achievement Award from the Political Science Education Section and the national Distinguished Teaching Award this year from APSA itself. I finished my career with my most important book, Democracy's Rebirth: The View from Chicago, although I have two final books on Chicago which will be published in 2022 and 2023.

Which APSA programs or events would you recommend to people who are not members of the association, and why?

The APSA programs and publications that promote civic engagement are among the most important for non-APSA members. APSA had endorsed the Civics Secure Democracy Act pending in Congress which would make Civic Education a priority like STEM education has become. We have published three major books (which are available for free to non-APSA members) on Teaching Civic Engagement in political science, across disciplines, and around the world. We have an APSA Educate website with important resources constantly updated on teaching the important topics of the day.

Is there anything else you'd like people to know about you or the work that you do?

Our American Democracy is in crisis. My book, Democracy's Rebirth, and the materials on the APSA Educate website provide a summary of the knowledge political scientists bring to the solutions for our challenges. I hope I can help start a full conversation and eventually a consensus on what is to be done to save (and improve) our democracy. ■
