A serious anomaly has haunted American development of East Asian studies. They are supported in the hope that better American understanding will help improve relations with East Asian peoples. Yet the relations themselves are seldom studied, with the result that we advance crabwise toward understanding problems we have faced and will face in East Asia.

At a time when knowledge about East Asia itself is increasing and spreading as never before, it is important to encourage new work, fresh thought, and new synthesis as well as to represent the present state of American-East Asian relations. This new series is one step in that direction.

American-East Asian Relations: A SURVEY

*edited by Ernest R. May and

A collection of essays by eighteen eminent scholars, sponsored by a Committee on American-East Asian Relations established by the American Historical Association. It provides the basis for new historical work in this developing field, whose purpose it is to understand the political, economic, and cultural relationships between America and Asia. The book lays the foundation for continuing studies which will affect the thinking of foreign-policy makers in the United States, East Asia, and around the world. Harvard Studies in American-East Asian Relations, 1. $15.00
