EDITORIAL POLICY

The British Journal of Political Science is an independent journal, whose policy is set by its editorial board. It is committed to no methodological orthodoxy over and above the normal canons of scholarship: clear and consistent use of words, logical and mathematical validity, and the use of appropriate evidence to substantiate empirical statements. Contributions are invited in all fields of political science, including political philosophy and political sociology. Work addressed to problems of general significance to students of politics will be published whatever the period(s) or place(s) drawn upon for evidence.

LAW AND STATE: The Case of Northern Ireland (Law in Society)

KEVIN BOYLE, TOM HADDON and PADDY HILLYARD

This book is based on the authors submission to the Gardiner Committee. It shows how the army has misused the system in pursuit of its own "military security" policy, based on a large scale screening in Republican areas, and how this results in different rules being applied to Protestant and Catholic suspects.

THE POVERTY OF EDUCATION: A Study of the Politics of Opportunity

DAVID BYRNE, BILL WILLIAMSON and BARBARA FLETCHER

The results of a research project which examined variations in the educational attainment of children from different social classes and regional backgrounds. The data are drawn from local educational authorities in England and Wales but the findings and the interpretation of the findings have a much wider significance.
