

Ready Soon!

THE NEW
Second Edition of
SIMPLIFIED RUSSIAN
GRAMMAR

Revised by
MISCHA FAYER, Ph.D.
Middlebury College

Coming soon is a complete revision of the country's most widely used Russian grammar, Simplified Russian Grammar by Fayer and Pressman.

New in this revision are review lessons at regular intervals and a greater emphasis on conversation and oral drill. The presentation of the grammar is further simplified.

The new stories and texts, carefully developed for interest and readability, make the new edition more enticing to the student. The vocabulary has been simplified; controversial topics have been avoided.

Among the other improvements are a clearer presentation of the alphabet in script and cursive letters, and a more attractive typographical format.

If you wish to examine the new Second Edition of Simplified Russian Grammar, write today reserving your examination copy. We shall send it to you as soon as the book comes off the press.

As noted in the October 1961 issue, the policy of this journal is to maintain some kind of balance between social sciences and humanities, Russia and Eastern Europe, past and present, in the subjects treated in each issue, but the basis for acceptance and rejection is first and foremost the quality of the manuscript submitted.

Contributors are asked to observe the procedure set forth on page 350 of the October 1961 issue.

MARGIN OF SUPERIORITY

We're so busily engaged with our 481 original works now under contract, we might be excused if we gave scant attention to our reprints.

Not at Collier.

Whenever we reprint a living author's work, he is invariably invited to revise it. As much as is necessary. From introduction to index, if he likes.

Sometimes this takes more time than we would like. Always it adds expense. But this procedure is typical of the scholarship and care that go into all Collier Books—originals and reprints.

Although we have published 400 titles in the past eight months (and plan 350 more this year), our ambitious program never ignores the purpose of it all:

To provide teachers with enrichment for their courses that goes beyond all previous standards of excellence and variety.
