

Professional Notes

The Profession

NORC Annotated Bibliography

The National Data Program for the Social Sciences has just completed its 1980 edition of the Annotated Bibliography of Papers Using the General Social Surveys. This 131-page bibliography cites over 400 scholarly papers, government reports, and books that use the General Social Surveys as a data source. Each citation includes a list of the surveys and variables employed and a short abstract. In addition there is a mnemonic index which allows the user to quickly locate any pieces using variables of interest. This bibliography can be ordered for $3.50 from Patrick Bova, Library, National Opinion Research Center, 6030 South Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637.

Michigan PUBLIC POLICY STUDIES

The Institute of Public Policy Studies (IPPS) at the University of Michigan is now offering a two-year course of study designed to prepare students for careers in the international field. Graduates can expect to begin their careers with federal agencies, international organizations such as the World Bank or the United Nations, or private consulting firms or banks.

In their first year, students will take seven courses in the IPPS core curriculum, including calculus, statistics, microeconomics, cost-benefit analysis, and organizational design, plus two international courses—World Politics and International Economic Policy. During the second year of the program, problem-oriented, interdisciplinary policy seminars such as those to be offered in 1980-81—International Commodity Policy and International Peace and Security Affairs—may be elected. Elective courses can also be taken from the extensive graduate offerings of the foreign area studies programs of the Departments of Political Science and Economics and the Schools of Business Administration and Law. The curriculum will continue to be enriched through the discussion of current international policy issues by especially invited speakers of note.

A public sector internship is required during the first summer and students will be assisted in locating positions in such federal agencies as the Departments of Defense, State, Commerce, and Treasury and the Agency for International Development.

Faculty associated with this program are Robert Stern, professor of economics, who will serve as chairman; Alan Deardorff, associate professor of economics; Allen Whiting, professor of political science and associate of the Center for Chinese Studies; William Zimmerman, professor of political science; and Robert Axelrod, professor of political science.

For further information contact Professor Robert Stern, Institute of Public Policy Studies, 1516 Rackham Building, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109.

SUNY PRESS Series on URBAN POLICY

The State University of New York Press has initiated a new series of related books on urban policy, and is seeking submission of high quality manuscripts that analyze urban problems and the public policies designed to cope with them. The series editors are especially interested in manuscripts that treat the following general policy areas:

Demographic and economic trends that impact urban policy;

Urban policy responses to an age of resource scarcity;

Government structure, service delivery, and political participation;

Capacity building for policy analysis in urban government;

Intergovernmental relations and urban policy;

Implementation of urban policy.

Manuscripts and proposals to write manuscripts addressing other areas will also be considered. Anyone interested in making a submission should send a letter of inquiry describing the work and its contribution to the urban policy literature in some detail to each of the series editors: Professor Mark Schneider, Department of Political Science, State University of New York at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, New York 11794, (516) 246-8288; Professor Richard C. Rich, Department of Political Science, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Blacksburg, Virginia 24061, (703) 961-5491.

New SYLLABI Checklist

A new inventory of political science course syllabi obtainable through the WPSA Syllabi Clearinghouse Project is now available. It includes all syllabi received through June, 1980. (Among the recent acquisitions: The Election Process, West European Community and the USA, Local Government Administration, Social Justice and Welfare Policy, Energy Politics, and Public Policy.) The project sells copies of syllabi from over 100 colleges and universities for about cost (5¢/page) of reproduction and mailing. For a copy of the latest syllabi, send 15¢ postage to: Professor Martin Gruberg, Department of Political Science, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh, Wisconsin 54901.

HARLAN CLEVELAND to Head Humphrey Institute

Harlan Cleveland, political scientist and public executive, has been named director of the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

Formerly U.S. Ambassador to NATO and president of the University of Hawaii, Cleveland has also served as editor and publisher of The Reporter and as dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University. Since 1974, he has been director of the Program in International Affairs of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies, with headquarters in Princeton, New Jersey.

The Humphrey Institute is a rapidly growing graduate school currently offering two degrees, the master of arts in public affairs and the master of planning. Under Cleveland's leadership, the Institute expects to develop a mid-career program, for successful specialists who are moving into general management or other jobs in what he calls "the get-it-all-together profession," which will take people who have reached the tops of the ladders in their various specialties and train them for reflective leadership in larger arenas.

As a center for the advanced study of governance, the Humphrey Institute will conduct policy research and analysis intended to provide—for governments, corporations, non-governmental organizations, and participatory publics—the stimulation of fresh, action-oriented thinking about the current crisis of governance in advanced industrial nations.

Information about the Humphrey Institute may be obtained from the Director, Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs, 909 Social Sciences, 267 19th Avenue South, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455.

British Politics Group SAMUEL BEER Prize

The 1980 British Politics Group Samuel H. Beer Prize for the best dissertation in British politics was won by Dr. Edmund Auger for his dissertation, "Social Fragmentation and Political Stability: A Comparative Study of New Brunswick and Northern Ireland."

Dr. Auger, who is a member of the Faculte St. Jean of the University of Alberta, received his Ph.D. from the University of California at Irvine. The dissertation was written under the direction of Professor William Schonfeld.

The British Politics Group invites nominations for the 1981 award of the prize. £100 will be awarded for the best dissertation in British politics completed during the calendar years of 1978, 1979, or 1980. Only a supervising professor may nominate a dissertation and each professor is limited to a single nomination.

A copy of the nominated dissertation, along with a brief letter of nomination, should be submitted to the Executive Secretary of the British Politics Group, 503 Ross Hall, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa 50011 no later than March 1, 1981. The principal criterion for awarding the prize shall be the dissertation's contribution to the understanding of British politics, whether that understanding derives from exclusively British research or from a comparative study. The winner of the award will be announced at the BPG's meetings at the time of the 1981 APSA convention in New York.

The Samuel H. Beer Prize is only one of several activities of the British Politics Group. The BPG is an organization composed primarily of North American political scientists, but including also some British members and people from other disciplines and non-academics. The unifying factor is an interest in British politics and a desire to keep in touch with those having a similar interest, thereby helping to strengthen the study of this field. The main means of communication is the quarterly Newsletter, now in its sixth year. Issues typically run about 20 pages and include short articles (e.g., discussions of recent opinion poll results, patterns of Parliamentary candidature, crime rate among immigrants), abstracts of professional papers, book reviews, news items about government action or policy, information about professional conferences and meetings, and visitors to and from Britain.

Every other year the BPG issues a Research Register. The listing for each individual indicates what topic he or she currently is studying, where and when he or she was in Britain, and any special funding that supported the research. The fourth edition of the Research Register will appear early in 1981. Anyone working in the British politics field who would like to be included (one need not belong to the BPG to be listed) should contact William Muller, Political Science, SUNY, Fredonia, New York 14063.

Early in 1979 the BPG issued an Annotated Bibliography providing brief comments on every book on British politics published in Britain during 1979. A similar publication is to be issued early in 1981 for books published during 1980.

In addition to organizing panels and discussion sessions each year at the time of the APSA meetings, the BPG has organized two special conferences on British politics. One was held at the University of Stirling in Scotland in 1976 and the other at Tulane University in 1978. In both cases the papers presented at the conferences were published subsequently as books.

The BPG holds corporate membership in the English-Speaking Union in London. This means that BPG members may use the club facilities of the E-SU at Dartmouth House near Berkeley Square. Magazines, newspapers, and TV are available in the lounges and luncheon and afternoon tea can be obtained. Dartmouth House is a convenient place to meet someone should calling on them in office or home not be appropriate. In addition to these facilities the E-SU has arranged for a 20 percent discount in the rooms of the adjoining Chesterfield Hotel. Thus one can obtain good accommodations at much below the normal London price.

Dues for membership in the BPG will remain at $10 for two years for new members until the end of 1980, after which they will increase to $15. Those wishing to join should send their check to Jorgen Rasmussen, Executive Secretary, British Politics Group, 503 Ross Hall, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa 50011.

COMMUNICATIONS Policy and Politics Papers

Individuals with research papers completed or in progress pertaining to politics and communications policy suitable for publication are invited to contact Dr. John Havick, Department of Social Sciences, Georgia Tech, Atlanta, Georgia 30083.

Committee on CONCEPTUAL AND TERMINOLOGICAL ANALYSIS Report 'Technology' in Political Analysis

The difficulties entailed in assessing the effects of technology in a variety of political contexts have been increased by the added difficulties of bringing to precision the concept of technology itself. Meanings range from intentionally abstract conceptions employed to capture a very vague but important phenomenon to very precise definitions which fail to capture the richness of theoretical nuance surrounding the conception. There are benefits for particular analytic and theoretical purposes made possible by either approach to the phenomenon, but an unintended consequence of employing the term to fit one's immediate needs is that it becomes most difficult to relate the results of analyses within one subfield of political science or sociology, not to mention the increased difficulty entailed in attempting to relate the understandings from all of the subfields to political and social theory as a whole. Current definitions have their uses, but it seems worthwhile to attempt to deal with current analyses of 'technology' in society with the end in mind of at least collating the fund of knowledge being assembled in various packages whose contents are assigned by a diversity of particular meanings of 'technology.' Therefore two series of exploratory panels are currently being organized by the Committee on Conceptual and Terminological Analysis of the International Political Science Association; the first series will be presented at the 1981 American Political Science Association Meetings in New York; the second, at the 1982 International Political Science Association Congress in Rio de Janeiro. Panels will be organized around the problem of technology as it affects subfields of political science (theoretical, comparative, international, and national analyses) with participants selected from among those whose research or theoretical analyses focus on the problem. The underlying questions to be addressed concern the meaning of 'technology' and how one might best improve our definitions in order to improve research and theoretical development in the subfields. Central to the efforts, of course, will be the desire to integrate better what is known and knowable about technology and its causes and effects in the political and social systems.

The first round of panels will be exploratory in tone; the second, should the effort prove successful, providing the results of a two-year exploration into the most eligible ways of defining the meaning of 'technology' for theoretical analysis and research. Ideally the participants at the two conferences will overlap and, in the months between the sessions, develop regular communications for cross-fertilization among the participating scholars. To be successful, theorists and researchers must work together in each group.

Both sets of panels are being organized by George J. Graham, Jr., Department of Political Science, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee 37235. Please contact him if you have interest in direct or indirect participation in the programs.

These panels are part of the work of the Committee on Conceptual and Terminological Analysis, which is a research committee of the International Political Science Association and of the International Sociological Association as well as being affiliated with I.S.S.C. and other international organizations. For information about other activities of the research group, please contact Fred W. Riggs, Department of Political Science, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu, Hawaii 96822.

WOMENS Bibliographical Items

For an annotated bibliography on the speech communication of women (personal, professional, and political), copies of unpublished papers delivered at professional meetings in the 1970s and of articles published in local or regional newsletters, bulletins, etc., in the 1970s that would not generally be subscribed to by major university libraries are being sought. Please include relevant bibliographical information of time, place, event, etc. This bibliography is under contract with Garland Publishing, Inc., Cambridge Scholarly Reference Center.

Please send materials to either Mary W. Jarard, Department of Speech Communication, 115 Bingham Hall 007-A, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27514 or Phyllis Randall, Department of English, Communication Building, North Carolina Central University, Durham, North Carolina 27707.

ASIAN AMERICAN Elected Officials Roster

The National Asian American Roster: 1980 is now available from the UCLA Asian American Studies Center.

The Roster contains the names and addresses of Asian American elected officials, major political appointees, and judges at the federal, state, county and municipal levels for 16 states of the United States, plus Guam, American Samoa and Canada. The publication also features a list of more than 60 major Asian American political party clubs, public employee groups, bar associations, and organizational representatives in Washington, D.C.

The Roster is designed to be of both practical and academic value, according to Dr. Don J. Nakanishi, UCLA professor of political science and Asian American studies, who compiled the work.

"The publication is intended to serve as a useful guide for citizens who are involved with the American political system and to stimulate further research on Asian American electoral politics," Dr. Nakanishi said.

The Roster is available for $2 from the UCLA Asian American Studies Center, 3232 Campbell Hall, Los Angeles, California 90024. Mail orders must be accompanied by 50¢ for postage and handling. California residents add 6 percent (12%) tax.

For further information, call Dr. Nakanishi at (213) 825-2974.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS AND ADMINISTRATION Book Series

James S. Bowman of the Department of Political Science of the University of Wyoming is editing a new series of books on public affairs and administration and invites contributions.

The series will be composed of book-length, annotated bibliographies. The titles in the series will generally parallel those found in standard public administration textbooks. Thus, bibliographies will be compiled on topics such as public budgeting, personnel management, decision making and public policy, organization theory, administrative responsibility, scope and methods, intergovernmental relations, citizen participation, comparative administration, the bureaucratic state, and related subjects.

Bibliographies on more specific issues are also planned. In addition, proposals for guides to information sources, directories, and other reference books are welcome. The minimum manuscript length is 100 pages; there is no maximum length.

Knowledgeable people specializing in the fields noted above as well as cognate areas are invited to send a proposal and brief statement of their interests and qualifications to: James S. Bowman, Series Editor, Department of Political Science, University of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyoming 82071.

Interested individuals are encouraged to submit proposals by December 15, 1980 so that the initial books in the series can be published during 1982. Book proposals submitted after December, 1980, if approved for publication, will be published in subsequent years. Complete manuscripts will be due approximately 12-18 months after signing of the contract. They will be published in hard cover by a major New York reference book publisher.

Journal of SOCIAL RECONSTRUCTION

Earl M. Coleman Enterprises, Inc. has announced the publication of a new journal, the Journal of Social Reconstruction. As stated by the publisher, "The Journal of Social Reconstruction has the goal of clarifying the means of recognizing the differences, and of attempting to demystify the notion of colonization and to develop the notion of reconstruction. The journal questions those who believe that science has a pristine method that escapes the social and political pressures of the times or that art is immune to such pressures. It is the position of the journal that conscience and science, for example, are intertwined and that science and its technologies must obey humane purposes which can and must be judged by those not directly involved in the immediate enterprise."

The Editor-in-Chief for the Journal is Marcus Raskin of the Institute for Policy Studies. The journal will welcome submissions for possible publication. Individual subscriptions are $19.50 annually; institutional subscriptions are $39.50. For further information write to Earl M. Coleman Publishers, P.O. Box 143, Pine Plains, New York 12567.

DEPARTMENTAL Chairperson Leadership Program

A recent grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation to the American Council on Education (ACE) will make a departmental chairperson leadership program developed at Florida State University available nationally.

The five-year, $500,000 grant will fund the implementation of training programs to strengthen the planning, management and leadership capabilities of departmental chairpersons in universities and colleges throughout the United States.

ACE has long recognized the need to improve the effectiveness of departmental leadership and has been granted exclusive rights outside of Florida to use the Florida State program, designed and developed by Dr. Allan Tucker, formerly Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs, State University System of Florida and now professor at Florida State University. Dr. Tucker will direct the national program for ACE.

The Kellogg Foundation supported the development and implementation of the project with an earlier grant of $502,938 to the State University System of Florida. The new grant to ACE represents funding to make the transition from in-state availability of the program to implementation on a national level.

Announcing the grant ACE President J. W. Pelton stated, "I believe the program will become one of the most important and successful initiatives in the area of college and university leadership. As the basic academic unit, the department is the place where colleges and universities conduct the majority of their activities. Effective leadership and administration of the department therefore is essential to the sound operation of an institution. Department leadership is also a basic training ground because department chairpersons often advanced to higher levels of administration."

The departmental chairperson development program was designed for use by educational systems, multi-campus institutions and consortia. ACE will provide training for more than 1,600 department chairmen, deans and academic administrators and will develop personnel in several education systems over a three-year period who can then take over training, reducing dependence on ACE. It will also adapt materials and evaluate the application of the programs at various institutions.

Four state systems or multi-campus institutions will implement the program in the first year of the project. They are: the University of Missouri (four campuses), University of Tennessee (four campuses), the South Dakota Board of Regents (including ten colleges), and the Board of Governors of State Colleges and Universities of Illinois (including five colleges).

The departmental chairperson leadership program is an addition to other activities of the ACE Center for Leadership Development and Academic Administration. Ongoing activities include issue, problem-oriented and skill-building seminars and week-long institutes for presidents, deans and other academic administrators. ACE also conducts a Fellows Program.

For additional information about this program, contact John Bennett, associate director of the Departmental Leadership Institutes at the American Council on Education, One Dupont Circle, Washington, D.C. 20036.

WOMEN'S Network

The Women's Network in Science and Technology is a long-range project funded by the National Science Foundation to explore careers for women in science and technology, and to build a regional network for women in those fields in Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota, and South Dakota. The project includes:

A conference November 7 and 8, 1980, at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, for re-entry and post-baccalaureate women in the region interested in science careers. The conference fee is $25, with special consideration given to those with limited funds;

Four one-day workshops to be held throughout the region in 1981, with a greater focus on undergraduate women seeking science careers;

Individual short-term observation periods with practicing scientists;

A directory of women in science throughout the region to be published at the conclusion of the project.

The Minnesota Women's Center is coordinating and administering the project as a whole. Other groups cooperating in the project include the Minneapolis/St. Paul chapter of Association of Women in Science, the University and Minnesota section of Society of Women Engineers, and Sigma Delta Epsilon. Other organizations and individuals are encouraged to join the network. The project is concerned with all areas of science, technology, and social sciences except clinical sciences. The primary goal is to attract and retain women in scientific fields.

The November conference will offer workshops in traditional and nontraditional employment options in science and technology, social responsibility of scientists, personal life and career integration, and career planning.

One-day workshops will be held in each quadrant of the region with coordination, speakers, and materials supplied by WNST. Some of the same topics will be covered as in the November conference, with a greater emphasis on undergraduates.

Women with interests in a specific field will be given opportunities to interact with practicing scientists, for periods ranging from one day to two weeks. WNST will coordinate, and individuals will make their own arrangements.

Each facet of the project will provide data for the directory, to be published at the end of 1981, listing women in science and support systems throughout the region. The entire project will be extensively evaluated by WNST; results will be available in March, 1982. For further information, contact: Women's Network in Science and Technology, 306 Walter Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455.

Center for HEALTH Studies

The Yale University Center for Health Studies has, over the last few years, completely re-oriented its research. Until recently, the Center conducted research primarily on the delivery of health services. The Center's present aim is to encourage collaborative research among epidemiologists, social scientists and lawyers in two major areas. The first, though certainly not parochial, is closest to being within what might be considered the purview of the traditional health care disciplines: social and environmental circumstances and processes that can affect health status. The second is the more radical departure in research, and concentrates on remedial political and economic interventions that may be routes to improved health. We examine the features of various forms of intervention, their feasibility, and likely results if they were implemented.

Several research projects by political scientists now involved or soon to be involved at the Center should be mentioned. One project attempts to link advocacy of various hypotheses regarding the etiologies of cancers and heart disease to political ideologies. It illustrates potential conflicts when paired hypotheses and ideologies are mingled, as they have been in the establishment of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. Another examines the international tobacco industry and its role in affecting world patterns of tobacco consumption. A third will compare the nature of regulation of occupational health hazards in Great Britain and the U.S.

Numerous other research projects conducted by economists and lawyers might also interest political scientists. These, for example, touch on administrative agency behavior in the face of various outside pressures applied and constraints imposed by the judicial and legislative branches, and the impact of regulation of health personnel and the services they provide on the structure of health care delivery systems.

The Center can offer a limited number of research appointments for scholars desiring a sabbatical and we hope to increase that number in the future as we expand into a full-fledged program of regulatory studies.

Anyone wishing to learn more about the Center or to obtain a listing of its working paper series is welcome to write to T. R. Marmon, Chairman, Center for Health Studies, P.O. Box 15A Yale Station, New Haven, Connecticut 06520. Professor Marmon is also the new editor of the Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law.

Study Group in GREEK Political Thought, American Chapter

Following an organizational meeting at this year's APSA convention, the American Chapter of the British Study Group in Greek Political Thought will be coordinated by Kent Moors, Department of Political Science, Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15219.

The association worldwide has membership in excess of 200, including political scientists, classicists, philosophers, historians, and specialists in comparative literature. The Study Group publishes Polis twice yearly, which is available to members without charge, and sponsors an annual conference in London, an American version of which is being organized.

Individuals interested in contributing to dialogue on classical political thought (broadly defined), or on the relationships between classical and modern thought, can receive further details about the association by contacting the above address.

PRESIDENCY Research Group

At the business meeting of the Presidency Research Group held on August 30 at the APSA convention, the following slate of officers was elected: President, Lester Seligman, University of Illinois; Vice President, Tom Cronin, Colorado College and University of Delaware; Secretary-Treasurer, Martha Joynt Kumar, Towson State University; Program Director, Francis Rourke, Johns Hopkins University; and Editor of the Newsletter, George Edwards, Texas A&M University. The Steering Committee is composed of the officers and the following members: Harry Bailey, Temple University; Larry Berman, University of California-Davis; Dom Bonafede, National Journal; Eric Davis, Middlebury College; Alexander George, Stanford University; Fred Greenstein, Princeton University; Erwin Hargrove, Vanderbilt University; Hugh Hecllo, Harvard University; Dorothy James, American University; John Kessel, Ohio State University; Anthony King, Essex University; William F. Mullen, Washington State University; Richard Neustadt, Harvard University; Stephen Wayne, George Washington University; Martha Weinberg, M.I.T.; and James Young, Miller Center of Public Affairs, University of Virginia.

At the meeting of the Steering Committee, Landis Jones presented a proposal drawn up by himself, Joseph Pika, and Tom Mann recommending that the PRG explore the possibility of establishing an internship program for presidential scholars. The matter will be fully explored with the APSA this year by a committee chaired by Stephen Wayne with Landis Jones, John Kessel, Tom Mann, and Lester Seligman as its members.

The Profession

George Edwards is interested in receiving the following kinds of presidency information for publication in the PRG newsletter: current research; point of view pieces on research and teaching, research funding, data collection opportunities. If you have anything you would like to submit, please contact him: Department of Political Science, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

The panels currently being planned include one chaired by James Young, "The Executive Office of the President: Growth and Development," a roundtable on teaching the presidency chaired by Martha Kumar, and a roundtable composed of White House staff people, "White House Staff: An Inside Perspective," to be chaired by Dom Bonafede. Professor Rourke will be putting together at least one more panel whose focus will depend on the paper suggestions he receives.

Frank Rourke is seeking paper proposals and participants for the PRG panels that will meet during the APSA convention in New York next August. He can be contacted at: Department of Political Science, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland 21218. Anyone interested in receiving the newsletter and becoming a member should send $3 to: Martha Joynt Kumar, Department of Political Science, Towson State University, Baltimore, Maryland 21204.

TRANSLATE POLITICAL THEORY INTO PRACTICAL POLITICS

Have you ever wondered how to make the theories of political science come alive? A constant problem of teaching political science is making it live for students—whether at the high school, college or graduate level.

CAMPAIGNS & ELECTIONS, the new quarterly of political management, can help you translate political theory into practical politics, making it come alive in a way that students will relate to. It's only $48 per year ($36 for members of The American Political Science Association like you).

The authors in the Inaugural and Summer issues of this new, one-of-a-kind journal have masterminded over 450 successful campaigns at every level of government. This new breed of political professional has added style and creative management to heretofore dull campaigns, winning dramatic victories by getting out that critical margin of votes on election day. Every article in CAMPAIGNS & ELECTIONS approaches a specific aspect of political campaign management from a "how-to" perspective, showing political pros and neophytes alike how the new politics of the '80s is changing everything.

And through it all, the nuts and bolts of managing money, media and people for a winning campaign anywhere—presented in a way guaranteed to excite! Media—Who's Using Whom? What IRS requires on the new forms all candidates must file... Coalition Building:

Labor Political Activities in the '80s... Impact Polling: Feedback for a Winning Strategy... The Pros Speak: Forging the New Politics... Image Strategems: Pick One for the '80s... Managing Campaigns in Turbulent Times.

And that's just a quick glimpse of the inside knowledge from CAMPAIGNS & ELECTIONS. You'll meet the most successful campaign strategists, pollsters, media experts, power brokers...soak up ideas, insights, innovations that candidates pay thousands of dollars to learn through expensive consultants.

The fact is, there is a renewed interest on the part of students, and the population in general, in campaign politics. Bona fide, not-for-profit institutions of higher education can receive C&E's articles and features in reprint form at substantial savings when ordered in bulk. You can drive home the lessons of political theory more effectively when you support them in practical terms.

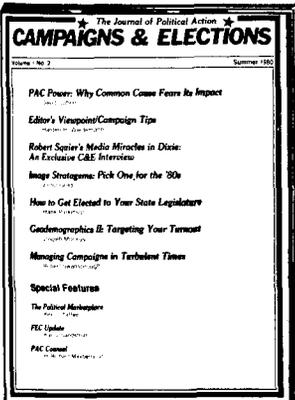

So fill out the form below or call our toll free number. Enclose your check, use your credit card, or ask us to bill you. Order today and C&E will be back on your desk by return mail.

for faster service

CALL TOLL FREE
800-345-8501

24 hours a day, 7 days a week

(In Pa. call 1-800-662-5180)

CAMPAIGNS & ELECTIONS 1067 National Press Bldg
Washington, D.C. 20045

Please sign me up at the special APSA member rate of $36 (25% off our regular $48 price). Please send me reprint information.

NAME _____

INSTITUTION _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ State/Zip _____

Payment Enclosed. Bill Me.

Charge to AE MC DC VISA

_____ Exp. Date: _____

or call: TOLL FREE 800-345-8501 (in Pa. call 1-800-662-5780) Add $20/year for airmail.