INTERNATIONAL LAW, 1981-1988. BOOK II.

Book II of the Cumulative Digest of United States Practice in International Law, 1981-1988, published by the Department of State, will become available at the U.S. Government Printing Office in August. Like Book I, it includes materials on which work was first begun in 1989, as well as a number of articles originally submitted by the Editor, Marian Nash (Leich), to the Journal under "Contemporary Practice of the United States Relating to International Law".

Book II consists of Chapters 6 through 9, and the first part of Chapter 10, the remaining sections of which are included in Book III, currently being printed. Book II contains materials in the areas indicated below, among others: Chapter 6, State Territory, Jurisdiction, and Jurisdictional Immunities (extraterritoriality, jurisdiction over vessels, judicial assistance, sovereign immunity, and acts of state); Chapter 7, The Law of the Sea and International Waterways (U.S. protests of violations of customary international law, in particular, of excessive claims by foreign states and attempted restrictions upon passage, the deep seabed including the 1994 Agreement Relating to Part XI of the 1982 Law of the Sea Convention, international watercourses, and international maritime law including the 1988 Maritime Terrorism Convention); Chapter 8, Aviation and Space Law (aircraft crimes, and the Space Station); Chapter 9, State Responsibility for Injuries to Aliens; Diplomatic Protection and International Claims; and Chapter 10, International Economic Law, §§ 1 through 5 (international monetary law, international trade, international economic assistance and development, transnational corporations, foreign investment, and tax law, and, lastly, foreign assets control).

Book II continues the practice followed in Book I of identifying drafters of articles by initials, with full names being listed at the beginning of the volume.

THE UNITED NATIONS AT FIFTY

The International Court of Justice after Fifty Years Robert Y. Jennings 493

Sir Robert Jennings, a long-time Judge and past President of the ICJ, reviews its fifty years of operation, focusing on procedural aspects of the Court's work. He finds that the Court's contentious jurisdiction today is in a rather healthy state as compared to the past, a development he attributes in part to an increasingly realistic appreciation of the Court's capabilities.

The Security Council's First Fifty Years Frederic L. Kirgis, Jr. 506

Professor Kirgis examines the normative evolution of the UN Security Council from Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco to the post-Cold War world of 1995. He deals with generic issues that run through the Council's practice, and then turns to such functional matters as the adoption of quasi-legislative acts and quasi-judicial determinations in the contexts of peace maintenance, enforcement measures and peacekeeping.

How American International Lawyers Prepared for the San Francisco Bill of Rights Louis B. Sohn 540

Professor Sohn examines the pre-San Francisco Conference origins of two principal strands of human rights law, the broad nondiscrimination clause and the addition of economic and social rights to the more traditional civil and political rights. The first strand was given major impetus by various groups of international lawyers after World War I; the second, by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in stimulating a more precise definition of the concept of "freedom from want."

International Criminalization of Internal Atrocities Theodor Meron 554

In view of the recent atrocities in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, Professor Meron assesses the current state of international humanitarian law applicable to noninternational armed conflicts and takes a fresh look at its penal and jurisdictional elements, especially universal jurisdiction. While emphasizing that national courts have the principal role to play in this regard, he finds that the Security Council's Statutes for the criminal Tribunals for Yugoslavia and Rwanda have contributed significantly to the development of international humanitarian law and its extension to internal conflicts.
