Aristotle

Aristotle's De Interpretatione Contradiction and Dialectic C. W. A. WHITAKER

Based upon a chapter-by-chapter analysis of the text, C.W.A. Whitaker presents the first systematic study of this work, and offers a radical new view of its aims, structure, and place in Aristotle's system. He shows that De Interpretatione is not a disjointed essay on ill-connected subjects, as traditionally thought, but a highly organized and systematic treatise on logic, argument, and dialectic.

Aristotle on the Perfect Life Sir ANTHONY KENNY

NEW
IN PAPERBACK

'no interpreter of Aristotle's moral philosophy can ignore Kenny's book... this work teaches us a great deal, as do all of Kenny's writings.' Mind

Aristotle's teaching on the subject of happiness is of vital importance to the question of the relevance of his ethics today. Anthony Kenny argues that we should look to the Eudemian Ethics for a comprehensive account of the perfect life, combining scholarly discussion of the Greek texts with reflection on the topics discussed by Aristotle.

Aristotle: Topics Books I and VIII

With excerpts from related texts
Translated with commentary by
ROBIN SMITH

This volume contains a clear and accurate translation of Books I and VIII of Aristotle's Topics, together with a philosophical commentary on these books and additional extracts from Books II and III, and from a related work by Aristotle. This selection gives a good general view of the main ideas of the Topics, a classic treatise on logic and argument. The volume is well suited to students, including those who do not know Greek.

Aristotle on Perception STEPHEN EVERSON

Stephen Everson presents a comprehensive new study of Aristotle's account of perception, which he places in the context of Aristotle's natural philosophy as a whole. This account is Aristotle's most sustained and detailed attempt to describe and explain the behaviour of living things, and is the focus of current debate about his theory of mind.

Classical Closure

Reading the End in Greek and Latin Literature
Edited by Deborah H. Roberts, Francis M. Dunn, and Don Fowler

The study of closure has played a significant part in contemporary literary criticism and is implicated in many of its concerns, from psychological aspects of the search for an end in narrative to the order imposed upon a text by politics or culture. This collection is the first large-scale attempt to assess the implications of closure for the study of classical literature.

Twelve new essays by an international group of scholars focus on endings in Greek and Latin literature. Embracing a wide range of ancient authors and genres, the collection begins by closely examining critical approaches to closure, and ends with a comparative discussion of ancient and modern narrative.

Each of the editors has contributed an essay to this volume. Additional contributors include Sheila Murnaghan, Ian Rutherford, Carolyn Dewald, Peta Fowler, Philip Hardie, W. R. Johnson, Alessandro Barchiesi, Massimo Fusillo, and Christopher Pelling.

"Encompassing some of the most vital issues of critical evaluation, these essays articulate links between classical literary interpretation and contemporary currents of interpretative discourse."

—Eleanor Winsor Leach, Indiana University

"This impressive and diverse collection explores the mechanics and dynamics of closure in a wide range of classical texts, demonstrating the continuing usefulness of closure as a critical category."

—Ellen Oliensis, Yale University

Household Interests

Property, Marriage Strategies, and Family Dynamics in Ancient Athens

Cheryl Anne Cox

Household Interests is one of the first books to explore in-depth the nature of the Greek household (oikos) in classical Athens. Whereas the oikos traditionally has been defined as the household of the nuclear family in Greece, Cheryl Anne Cox reveals it as a much more fluid structure, distinguishing between the concepts of "household" and "family."

After first examining marriage patterns, Cox turns to inter-family relationships. Finally, she considers how property transfer through adoption, guardianship, and remarriage, and the intervention of friends, concubines, and slaves, all contributed to expanding the boundaries of the household beyond kin.

"Cox is able to lead others through the tangled undergrowth of Athenian family squabbles with the confidence that comes from complete control of her material."—Mark Golden, University of Winnipeg

Nature, Justice, and Rights in Aristotle's Politics

FRED D. MILLER, Jr

Fred Miller offers a controversial reappraisal of Aristotle's Politics, suggesting that nature, justice, and rights are central to Aristotle's political thought. He sheds new light on Aristotle's relation to modern natural rights theorists such as Hobbes and Locke, and to the current liberalism-communitarianism debate. This book will be of value to philosophers, political scientists, classical scholars, and anyone interested in the theoretical foundations of human rights.

PLATO'S CRITIQUE OF THE ARTS

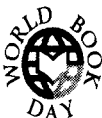

CHRISTOPHER JANAWAY

'lucid and thoughtful ... effective both as an introduction to the topic and as a contribution to scholarly debate'

Christopher Gill, British Journal of Aesthetics

Christopher Janaway both illuminates Plato's criticisms of the arts in the context of his own philosophy and locates him in today's philosophy of art, providing a new, original view of a famous issue in the history of ideas.
